An aerial map of the Hofkirche area in Dresden. The church's distinctive dome and surrounding Baroque structures are clearly visible. The map also shows the surrounding city layout, including streets like Frankenstraße, Sächsische Straße, and the Augustusbrücke. Landmarks such as the Semperoper and the Zwinger are also indicated.

An aerial map of Ingolstadt, Germany, showing the area around the Ingolstädter West station. A large black polygon highlights a specific residential development area. Labels include 'Tivoli Straße', 'Paus für Kinder am Hasenbuck', 'Parzzentrum St. Theresia', 'Ingolstädter West', 'Südlicher Kreisler-Weg', and 'Nummerweiher West'. The map also shows several green spaces and other urban structures.

An aerial map showing the area around the intersection of Amalienstrasse and Eiserfelder Strasse. The map includes several residential buildings, a church, and a park-like area with trees. A road labeled "Eiserfelder Strasse" runs horizontally across the bottom of the frame.

An aerial photograph showing a complex network of roads and streets. A large, semi-transparent circular overlay is centered on the image, obscuring a significant portion of the road grid. The overlay has a thin black border and a light gray fill. In the bottom right corner of the image, there is a small, dark circular icon containing a white letter 'A'.

This is a horizontal strip from a larger map, showing a detailed view of a road network and some building footprints. The strip is oriented horizontally and shows a mix of straight and curved roads, with various buildings represented by white shapes against a black background.
